REPORTING OF NEW CONSTRUCTION COSTS

Why Reporting New Construction Costs is Important

New construction plays an important role in both the 5.5 percent property tax limit and the TABOR local growth calculation. New construction also plays a key role in determining the target percentage used in the residential assessment rate calculation.

Section 20 of article X of the Colorado Constitution (TABOR) places several limits on the budgets of local and state governments. Two of these limits, the local government fiscal year spending limit and the property tax revenue limit, require the calculation of "local growth." For non-school taxing entities, "local growth" is the percentage change in the actual value of real property resulting from taxable new construction and other additions minus taxable destroyed property and other deletions. Most local taxing entities, other than school districts and home rule municipalities, are also subject to a statutory limitation found in § 29-1-301, C.R.S. This restriction, called the 5.5 percent property tax revenue limitation, is similar in concept to the TABOR property tax limit, but it is calculated using a different set of data. Unlike TABOR, new construction for the 5.5% limit includes both newly constructed real property and associated personal property. Another difference is that the 5.5% limit calculation does not deduct for the removal or destruction any real property.

Definitions of Real and Personal Property that Apply

The detail is in § 39-1-102, C.R.S.: (14) for real property; (7) for improvements; and (11) for personal property. In summary, all fencing and walled roofed structures, custom or prefabricated, constitute real property. Fixture systems, like HVAC, plumbing, and electrical are real property. Right-of-way wires, cables, and pipes, above and below ground, are personal property. Furniture, trade fixtures, and equipment, including telecommunication towers, are personal property.

New Construction Costs to be Reported in the Annual Statement of Property

Report the installed net book value of qualified newly constructed real property and associated personal property, placed in service as operating property during the preceding calendar year up to and including December 31. New personal property is reported only when it is associated with qualified new construction real property.

Qualified new real property includes:

- New construction real property capitalized and reported as operating property or contributions in aid of construction (CIAC). These items are fencing and walled roofed structures affixed to the land regardless of permanence and access to utilities.
- Additions to real property if the addition costs are capitalized and reported as operating property or CIAC. An addition could be additional square feet to an existing building, or the expansion of an area enclosed by fencing.

New construction does not include:

- The acquisition of vacant land or land with existing improvements.
- The expansion, upgrade, or addition, of only personal property not associated with newly constructed real property.

New Real Property in One County, and Associated Personal Property in Multiple Counties

Pipelines and electrical transmission systems often span several counties. The pipelines and electrical lines themselves are personal property, but the system might also include real property structures. When a newly constructed system spans several Colorado counties, and it includes a new structure(s) constructed in at least one of the counties, the associated new personal property is itself new construction and shall be apportioned to all counties wherein the personal property is located. The new real property is only reported in the county with situs. Outside of this condition, a new construction worksheet is not required if new personal property is known not to be associated with new real property.

If you have additional questions regarding how new construction is incorporated into TABOR or the 5.5 percent revenue limit calculation, please contact the Administrative Resources Section of the Division of Property Taxation at 303-866-2371.
